

Spontaneous Watercolor Painting with Gerilyn Gaskill

May 9, 2026
9:30 – 12:30

It's all about applying colors to the page and allowing them to blend and flow naturally. Picture the scene in your mind, then gradually enhance that vision. I'll share insights on how different water-to-paint ratios interact with various types of paper, from glossy to non-glossy, and how dampness affects your brush strokes. We'll begin by wetting part of the paper while leaving another section dry, then use a plastic card to gather a few dabs of paint and gently scrape it across the surface, letting the colors mix organically. From there, we'll explore various watercolor techniques like spraying, splattering, and wet-into-wet, guiding the colors and shapes to create a stunning piece of art.

Gerilyn Gaskill was born in Wilmington, DE. She began painting at a young age with instruction by her great-grandfather, August Seiler, who painted coastal imagery. By her high school years, she was living in Rehoboth and received instruction from Howard Schroder. That was when she developed a passion for fine-art painting.

She works primarily with watercolor, often using the white paper as a color. She combines loose washes, wet-into-wet, dry brush, and all the techniques possible with the transparency of this unique medium.

When not painting she is teaching others to paint, to experience the same joy she has. She believes everyone has the ability to paint whether they know it or not. She volunteers with local youth classes as well as instructs at many of the areas' art leagues.
